Project Management Institute. Pune-Deccan India

CHAPTER ARTICLE BRIEF

Volunteer spotlight: Harshal Varkhedkar

Original publication: 2023-12-01 | Volunteer voices

Abstract

The chapter's volunteer interview with Harshal Varkhedkar explores the relationship between professional development and service to the community. It describes his learning background and programme-coordination experience, then reflects on motivation, practical challenges, people skills and the value of staying connected to a professional network. The profile retains its historical context rather than presenting past roles as current appointments.

Key highlights

- Chapter events offer opportunities for professional development and practical coordination experience.
- Volunteering builds leadership, communication and people skills.
- Clear objectives and flexible project management help balance competing priorities.
- A sustained professional network supports learning and meaningful contribution.

This PDF is a concise article brief prepared from the chapter's published account. The original article remains available through the source link.

Read the original chapter article:

https://pmipunechapter.com/volunteer-of-the-month/volunteer-of-the-month-harshal-varkhedkar/